

IEU Victoria Tasmania

STOP Gendered Violence @ Work

The Victorian Trades Hall Council released its report, STOP Gendered Violence at Work in November 2016. The report is a result of conversations with Victorian women about their experience of work and represents the commitment of the IEU and other unions to eliminate gendered violence at work. This is the first step towards achieving the elimination of this hazard in the workplace.

This webinar focuses on defining violence at work in a way that reflects women workers' experience of violence. It is open to all employees but in particular, school leaders, health and safety representatives, members of occupational health and safety committees and IEU sub branch reps. It will include real-world examples, discussion and the opportunity to interact with the presenters.

'When we speak with women about their experience of work, they speak about their pride in their labour, their feeling of collectivism with workmates and their various struggles for a better working life. It is not until we specifically ask them about gender inequality in the workplace that they tell their stories; of being disrespected, of being harassed, of daily abuse, lingering misogyny and sometimes violence.'

Luke Hilakari, Victorian Trades Hall Council Secretary

Tuesday 21 March, 2.00pm - 3.00pm

FREE for IEU members, $40 for non-members

To book, visit www.ieuvictas.org.au/ohswebinar

For information, email ohs@ieuvictas.org.au (quoting course code HSW171)

