Managing Asbestos:
Duties and Compliance

IEU Safety Network Seminars 2014, Round 2

As part of their Occupational Health and Safety Management Systems, all schools should have an Asbestos Management Plan. The purpose of such a plan is to ensure all duties under the Act and Regulations are being complied with and that risks associated with the presence of asbestos in the school are being eliminated or controlled. This seminar addresses the purpose of an asbestos management plan, asbestos registers and the actions required to control the risks of asbestos in the workplace, including the labelling of asbestos containing materials.

As part of its continued support for health and safety representatives, the IEU has recently produced a handbook to assist reps further understand how to use their powers effectively. The handbook explains how to get a rep elected, the steps to take to identify hazards and control risks, and, some practical examples of how reps have used the Act and Regulations to make their workplace safer.

Health and Safety Representatives, Deputy Health and Safety Representatives, Health and Safety Committee members, Principals and members of school leadership teams should attend. Health and Safety Reps and Principals attending together is particularly encouraged.
